Credits: Visualization of icons for Game Icon Pack ----- DeefCee. Q: Moving a div in the screen using a vector(javascript)? I want to create a div and place it at random position of the screen(using Javascript). The position of the div will not change(I am not using jQuery). I am using a vector for this. I tried : function random(min, max) { return Math.floor(Math.random() * (max - min + 1)) + min; } var x = Math.floor(Math.random() * (screenWidth - 60)) + 10; var y = Math.floor(Math.random() * (screenHeight - 60)) + 10; var posX = random(50, screenWidth - 60); var posY = random(50, screenHeight - 60); $("divToPlace").css({ left: posX, top: posY }); However, this is not working as I want(nothing happens). I think the vector is not what I want. How to achieve this? Edit: Also, the div I want to move is relatively placed. So, if I change the left position of a div in the css, I want that to reflect in the position of the div in the screen(in the view). A: You can use offset of position and left offset of absolute div's css properties to place div in random position: function random(min, max) { return Math.floor(Math.random() * (max - min + 1)) + min; } var x = Math.floor(Math.random() * (screenWidth - 60)) + 10; var y = Math.floor(Math.random() * (screenHeight - 60)) + 10; var posX = random(50, screenWidth - 60); var posY = random(50, screenHeight - 60); $("divToPlace").css
